When doctors disagree, what shall Judge Hall do?

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman will be numbered among Britain's great men.

The Vermont branch of the New England Progressive League is also a Bryan League.

There is a plumber in Rutland who goes under the name of Dim, and we venture to say that his neighbors know it.

The net loss to the country by remigration of Europeans since the first of the year has been 100,000, and it promises to be more.

Ex-Senator William E. Chandler of New Hampshire is the latest Republican to predict that his party has got a fight on its hands this year.

Things must be picking up at Harvard, for two of her athletic organizations won victories yesterday. Perhaps in time President Eliot may get over his antipathy to athletics.

That Marshall J. Haggood of Peru, Vermont, is ready and willing to go to Chicago as a delegate to the Republican national convention he tells us by a communication in another column. In fact, this is not the first time that Mr. Haggood has harkened for the call.

We are a critical people; here is the president's secretary, Mr. Loch, felt called upon to explain to the people of the nation how he came to have 4,700 shares of stock in the Washington Railway and Electric company. Besides piling up material wealth, Mr. Loch is attaining a wealth of experience with human nature.

The forming of a "law and order" league in Richmond would indicate that the northern border town is a terrible place; but we give Richmond credit for being something besides that. In fact, the forming of such an organization is evidence that there is so strong a sentiment against lawlessness that the sporadic outbreaks of it by a minority element will not be tolerated.

With Rhode Island such a tiny state, it is quite remarkable that one-eighth of the territory of the city of Providence is set aside for parks, playgrounds and public squares. What is more remarkable, the city is planning to extend its system of public grounds. All this tends to the well-being of its inhabitants and to the beauty of the municipality, and Providence will find it money well spent, even if not already found to be so.

PRESIDENT TUCKER'S DECISION.

The wisdom of Dartmouth college trustees a year ago in refusing to accept the resignation of President William J. Tucker, on the ground that his impaired health might improve so that he could again take up the active work of the office, is borne out by results; for President Tucker is so much improved that he is able to continue at the head of New Hampshire's famous institution. He will be, however, relieved of much of the outside work that devolves upon the president of the institution and which is so wearing to nervous energy. But that part of the president's duties may be easily transferred to some other shoulders, leaving President Tucker free to carry out cherished plans of his administration. Dartmouth college is to be congratulated that it is to retain its popular and successful educator.

ENGLISH OF THE JUDGES.

A great many people will heartily agree with the New York Sun in its lament over "judicial English" as it is written, meaning the construction of sentences in bench opinions. The contemporary finds a text for its lament in the disappointment over Supreme court Judge Holmes' failure to straighten out the dictum of the decisions of that court. The disappointment is natural. Those who have undertaken to untangle the intricacies of the average judicial document which is handed down from the high places remember how they have floundered about in the maze of words, tangled constructions and digressions, and have wished that the fates would send them a judge who could and would write clear English. Just what virtue lies in grammatical chaos is not apparent to the lay mind, at least. Lawyers, too, and capable lawyers—men who are conversant with legal dictation, have been known to express the same impatience. Yet we continue to get long, involved, beating-about-the-bush, circumlocutions in exasperating array. Why not call a spade a spade, and later attempt to make people believe it's a carrier's hod or a coal scuttle?

CURRENT COMMENT.

The Braggart Falls.

There is a lesson for food fastidians in Senator La Follette's serious illness, which includes inflammation of the stomach. For years newspapers have been telling Mr. La Follette's devotion to vegetarianism and how he could live a week on a dish of corn husks and half a dozen walnuts. He has bragged of his good health, which he attributed to diet, although on more than one occasion he has broken down when he needed all the strength possible. If what is claimed for vegetarianism is true, Mr. La Follette's stomach should be in first class condition. Yet he is ill with stomach trouble, and his condition is so serious a lesson is felt for him. There is not much chance that a man is right who says that the experience of mankind for centuries as to what is best to eat should be disregarded, and who sets out to establish a new rule of life for the race.—Rutland News.

TESTIMONY COMPLETED.

Graham and Judge W. H. Taylor as special masters. The taking of testimony in this case, which was commenced in February, 1905 is now completed. During this time the masters have heard testimony nine full weeks. The arguments in the case will be made August 4 at Woodstock, after which the masters will prepare their report, which will finally go to the presiding judge of Caledonia county court where the case was originally entered.

TROUBLE IN INDIA.

Serious Rebellion Has Broken Out in Northern Part.

Simla, India, April 22.—A serious native rebellion has broken out in northern India. The Mohamads tribe, a thousand strong, is already in the field. General Kitchener, commanding England's military force in India, will arrive on the frontier Saturday to take charge of the situation. The indications are that the amir of Afghanistan instigated it and is encouraging the uprising, which makes the trouble additionally threatening.

WOULD GO AS DELEGATE.

M. J. Haggood, the Peruvian, Would Also Work for Roosevelt.

Editor, Times: I notice my name suggested by state daily up North, as a delegate for the national convention at Chicago. Now if the members of the state convention should desire to elect me as one who has "no iron in the fire," has no connection, whatever, with any machine politics—as one who has been a thorough Roosevelt supporter from the beginning, and would use his best efforts for his renomination at Chicago, believing that whatever may have been his previous declarations, he still will be guided by a deep regard for the best interests of the country, and that what we want is not a "disciple" or an "imitator," but the genuine, Simon-pure article, to complete the struggle so nobly begun against fraud and corruption in high places and for the development of our natural resources, I should be pleased to serve as a delegate.

As a delegate to the state convention, I shall lend my support to such a policy of action, and I believe that the heart and mass of the people at large are in full sympathy with the above principle of action. The only question is, will the heart and mass of our people be truly represented at our convention by persons of fearless and courageous action?

M. J. Haggood.

Peru, April 22.

Prospective Forest Reserve in Vermont's Peru.

As a contribution to the necessary preservation of forests in the still noble woodlands of New England, the proposed action of Marshall J. Haggood of Peru, Vt., is of initial importance, and his example ought to arouse many forest warriors on the Green mountains to do likewise. He desires to transfer to either the state of Vermont or the national government a thousand and odd acres of forest land on the top and sides of Mount Bromley, a great peak of the Green mountains, which overshadows the beautiful plateau of Peru,—the title to rest in the state or nation, with no right for cutting reserved except under conditions prescribed by these trustees. This land has never yet been cut over except in parts a great many years ago for lumbering purposes, and it contains the headwaters of many great brooks, important tributaries to the Connecticut on the east. It is Mr. Haggood's idea that this tract shall be perpetually protected for watershed and for scenery,—therefore never to be cleared for money-making considerations. This is in the interest and advantage of the owner, as it would be were the example to be followed for the hundred thousand or more of the great mountain tract of which it is a part. Mr. Haggood is one of the principal lumberers of this region, and has never "cleared" a tract of woods, but simply cut out the valuable timber from year to year, so that his woods are practically unbroken forests. Almost all the mountainous regions of Peru have been growth yet remaining, notably one quite treated in this fashion, and there is nothing more delightful to the rambling in woods than that extraordinary picture of a town and its neighboring towns. It is well said by an old writer:

"Peru is particularly fortunate in respect to her forests. It is possible to drive for several miles over one of her mountain roads without touching any opening or meeting any indication of any lumbering operations for several years. There are several tracts of primeval extensive and at the head of a mill pond which was built at the first settlement of the town. Also another tract, through which the main highway extends, said to be the only instance of the kind in the parts."

The fact that Mr. Haggood is a lover of wild Nature, and has had a delight in the unspoiled forests emphasizes the other fact that he comprehends the essential value of such preservation of the forest for the continuance of streams that furnish power for industries such as his own. The idealist is the most practical of men. He wants to see the whole vast tract of lofty hills now, purely forested kept so by judicious use instead of giving it over to the portable saw-mill, which means simply destruction. More private proprietors ought to follow this lead.—Springfield Republican.

Bellows Falls, April 22.—The wedding of Henry Curtis Supton of Lowell, Mass., and Miss Grace Olivia Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Williams, at Immanuel Episcopal church last night brought together one of the most brilliant assemblies in the social history of the city.

WANTS TO GET OUT.

Attorney R. W. Taft of Burlington Held in Jail.

Burlington, April 22.—R. W. Taft, confined in Chittenden county jail for contempt of court in failing to pay alimony and suit money to Mrs. Winona B. Taft, his former wife, has brought a prayer for relief in Franklin county court, the papers having been filed in St. Albans yesterday afternoon. The prayer for relief sets forth that immediately after his commitment to close jail, Mr. Taft offered to deed to Mrs. Taft, free of debt, the house at 92 Grant street, this city, valued at about $2,400 in settlement of all claims of alimony for herself and for the support of the minor child. This offer was declined by Mrs. Taft.

In the prayer for relief the offer is renewed, the proposition being laid before the court, Mr. Taft asking that upon the tender of the deed of the premises to Mrs. Taft, he be adjudged as purged of contempt and released from jail. Judge W. W. Miles is presiding over the March term of Franklin county court. It is expected that there will be an early hearing in the matter.
